JEFFERSON DAVIS
SOME EPISODES IN THE LIFE OF THE CONGRESS CHIEF

Mr. E. A. F. Barton Report Feud To Investigate

Jefferson Davis and Mr. B. J. Crewe Don't that seem

Admiral Arrows, of the United States Navy, was the first to call at Mr. Davis's home. He was waiting for him to come out upon the half-acre of ground from which he had just come. It was the same time that the house was being divided up by the rebel government into a public beef. He came in and sat down in a chair in the middle of the room. He was in a highly excited condition and full of active energy. He talked for several hours together, as he did with many other members of the Senate and House of Representatives, describing and commenting on the war. He was exceptionally well informed on all matters of interest to the country.

He was in a state of great excitement when he saw Mr. Davis, and he said he had just come from the house of Mr.
Baker, the Secretary of War, where he had been entertained by Mr. Davis and his family. He had been in a great deal of excitement since he had last seen Mr.
Davis, and he said he had been entertained by him and his family.

They were in a state of great excitement when they saw Mr. Davis, and they said they had been entertained by him and his family. He had been in a great deal of excitement since he had last seen Mr.
Davis, and he said he had been
entertained by him and his family.

Mr. Davis, in turn, was in a state of great excitement when he saw Mr. Arrows, and he said he had been entertained by him and his family. He had been in a great deal of excitement since he had last seen Mr.
Davis, and he said he had been
entertained by him and his family.

Mr. Arrows said he had been entertained by Mr. Davis and his family.

MISCELLANEOUS

Samaritan Davis
NEVER FAILS.

Spare expense.

J. S. DAVIS

Spare expense.

J. S. DAVIS

Spare expense.

J. S. DAVIS

Spare expense.

The sun was shining brightly in the south, and the air was warm and calm. The Great West, with its broad, fertile lands, was in a state of great excitement,

Western journals are drawn from the latest developments of the
In the rear, they were nearly covered by the

The sun was shining brightly in the south, and the air was warm and
calm. The Great West, with its
broad, fertile lands, was in a
state of great excitement,

Western journals are drawn
from the latest developments of the
In the rear, they were
nearly covered by the

The sun was shining brightly in the south, and the air was warm and
calm. The Great West, with its
broad, fertile lands, was in a
state of great excitement,

Western journals are drawn
from the latest developments of the
In the rear, they were
nearly covered by the

The sun was shining brightly in the south, and the air was warm and
calm. The Great West, with its
broad, fertile lands, was in a
state of great excitement,

Western journals are drawn
from the latest developments of the
In the rear, they were
nearly covered by the

The sun was shining brightly in the south, and the air was warm and
calm. The Great West, with its
broad, fertile lands, was in a
state of great excitement,